

INFORMATION ABOUT USING COOKIES

This site uses Cookies. We provide you with information on how and for whom cookies are used and how you decide whether to leave cookies or to remove them.

What is a cookie?

Cookies are information items that are transferred from the website to your computer and stored on hard drive. These are small text files that allow web sites to save and regain access to information about user browsing habits. Cookies are used by most web sites as they are one of the many tools that help to tailor web content to user needs. Cookies allow web sites to provide user-driven services (for example, by remembering login data, keeping purchases in a shopping cart, or displaying only specific content that interests the user). Cookies are different: Temporary Cookies (or Session Cookies) - removed when the browser is closed; permanent cookies - are not removed and remain until they are removed by user or until their validity expires.

How to remove a cookie?

Most browsers are set to automatically accept cookies. You can disable cookies in your browser, but be aware that if you do so, you may lose the ability to use the many features necessary to make the website work as well. If you need more information about cookies, visit www.aboutcookies.org for detailed, independent information on how to disable cookies through your browser preferences and how to remove cookies that are already on your computer. To remove cookies from your mobile phone, you will need to read the phone's instruction manual.
